Article published on March 17th 2012 | Art

If you are the kind of person who loves to read and be up to date with American Idol happenings, then this guide will let you know the secrets of predicting the winner of this incredibly popular contest. American Idol has been, over the past 11 seasons, one of the most viewed and appreciated shows, mainly because it offers talented people the opportunity to become famous and successful. In order to predict the winner of this season, you will need to watch the show weekly and also catch the American Idol spoilers online.

Even though it is an entertaining show, it is best to pay attention to the voice rather than the song and remember the contestants who have received good critiques from the jury. In general, the contestants who received praises and impress the jury stand out in the crowd even from the first auditions.

Besides the actual voice of the singer and positive comments and feedback of the jury, another way you can tell a participant has high chances of winning is by observing the live audience's reactions. The live audience usually comes with supporting signs and has enthusiastic responses for their favorite candidates. Although you might perceive the public's feedback as insignificant, the truth is that their reaction is usually an indicator that can help you tell who is popular and can get more votes.

At the same time, a contestant who is appreciated by viewers will generally have a high search volume on the internet. Therefore, next time you are searching for American Idol spoilers, type in the names of the contestant who meet the aforementioned description and see the internet trends. Overall, a participant who managed to achieve high numbers on iTune sales or has uploaded videos and music in the past will have a better chance at winning.

Speaking of trends, one suggestion is browse through the past winners and analyze the evolution of the votes they received. Looking back at the last seasons' winners, you can easily reach the conclusion that a great-looking male singer will have the highest chances of winning the competition. However, as you have learned from the past American Idol spoilers, that gorgeous male singer also needs to have a highly appealing voice and receive a lot of positive feedback from the jury and live audience. While not necessarily a rule, the popular music trends can also increase or decrease his chances of winning American Idol.

In the eventuality that you miss a show, you should find out who was eliminated a night before. The good news is that this information can be easily learned by checking the official American Idol's website and looking at the page with the contest winners and losers. In general, you can find the result from the last show published on the home page if you are looking for them the next immediate day. However, if you need to review something about the past shows or need to learn who was eliminated, you should check out their episode recaps section. Good luck predicting season 11 winner!

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/art-articles/do-you-want-to-predict-the-next-american-idol-winner.htm - Article Side

Bruce - About Author:

I'm a bit of a cheater so I always go for the a American Idol spoilers on some really reliable websites â€“ well, who doesn't like a bit of the inside scoop? If you want o be ahead of the TV viewers this year to know who's in and who's out, check out spoilers for a American Idol 2012!

Article Keywords:
American Idol spoilers, American Idol 2012

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!