Today letâ€™s talk in detail for those who want to start with a business and see some basic which are very important especially when someone is new to the business.

There are many ways using which one can start a business. It depends from country to country or even state to state what kind of business will be suitable. We have picked some generic way that is followed in almost every country these days. The first one being Sole Proprietorship, which is popular among the SME and has been there for a while and other to follow are Partnership, Corporation and Cooperatives.

For those who are trying to open and small business or want to open a business with a small venture can go for the Sole Proprietorship as it allows it has some advantages like freedom to take decision, subsides from the government, less tax burden if your business is not doing well.

The second one would be Partnership; it is more like the Sole Proprietorship the only difference would be, you may not be the sole decision making person, you may have others who have their say as well. However the benefits of Partnership are one can divide the burden of investment to other partners.

The third method of setting up a business is Corporation; the method allows you to spread your business in a better way than the above mentioned ways. Though you may not be the sole owner of the Corporation but as a major share holder you can make decision and the ownership can be transferred to someone else in future.

Cooperatives is the last form of business we will discuss toady and this is one of the way which includes a group of members running a business. It is inspired from the democratic way of doing business as every member holds a vote and any decision is taken once every one is favors it. Though you may own the entire profit made but it is equally shared among the members of the origination. Thus with limited investment one can yield a better return and this should be the best available option especially when a business needs advice from experts from different field.
