Saving Money with Commercial Furniture for Your Restaurant by Thomasgalvin

Many people attempt to save money by buying their outdoor restaurant furniture from residential sources such as The Home Depot or Walmart. The problem with this idea is that residential furniture is not meant for the wear and tear of commercial usage. Outdoor restaurant furniture is not only manufactured to withstand being used hundreds of times per day, it is manufactured to handle outdoor weather conditions. If you take an outdoor chair from Walmart and put it on a restaurant patio, it will break very quickly. Just the frequency of replacement makes using residential furniture cost-ineffective, but if someone hurts themselves, the restaurant can find itself facing an expensive lawsuit that would force them to shut down. Residential outdoor furniture also does not have the same standardized heights as commercial furniture. Because it is not made to sit and eat on, the height of the seats will not match standard restaurant bar and table heights.

The only place to buy outdoor restaurant furniture is from commercial restaurant furniture dealers. Commercial outdoor restaurant furniture is sturdy and attractive and many people actually decide to spend the extra money and buy commercial furniture for their homes, because they know it will last longer and they will save money in the long run. To find a good value on commercial furniture, many restaurants will go to the wholesale restaurant furniture market. These furniture suppliers bring commercial grade furniture to the market at wholesale prices that are significantly discounted from retail. The internet is a good place to shop for wholesale restaurant furniture and common searches for these suppliers are â€œAmerican Wholesale Restaurant Furnitureâ€• or â€œAmerican Hospitality Furn

The only catch is that these wholesale restaurant furniture dealers are hesitant to take in small orders because their profit margins are lowered to provide their customers greater discounts. They are happy to take on orders greater than $2000 because there is enough volume that they can provide deals and give their customers even better discounts. Big shipments can also usually save money on freight costs because it is much more cost effective to send a full truckload of furniture instead of a truck with just a few chairs in the back.

Understandably, some customers are hesitant to buy from an online Wholesale restaurant furniture company, but take the time to ask the companyâ€™s sales associates about any concerns. They are used to these requests and donâ€™t mind sending customers a sample of their products before a customer places a large order. Also, you will find that many of these websites do have a physical presence and they may have a local showroom in your area. Even if they do not have a showroom in your area, the better wholesale furniture dealers will carry items that have at least a one-year manufacturerâ€™s warranty to protect against defects.
