Getting engaged and finally getting married is subjected to be the most exciting part of oneâ€™s life. Although, planning for the engagement day and D day is quiet exciting and enthusiastic but one cannot deny that is both back wrecking and painstaking. Even if you are totally organized for the day, but there are few factors that ask for thorough concern.

All must have heard about wedding favours. In actual, it is a little ornament, memento or edible treat that is given to the guest who have been an important part of the occasion. It is basically a thank you token given to all for attending the big day. This tradition started in the 16th century and since then it has been an important part of the events like wedding. Now, it is a vital part of the cultures and various countries. Prior, these were part of the weddings that were classy and were really high class. Conventionally a weeding favour used to be sugar coated almonds presented in a small box or hand tied tulle net. It was believed that it comprised of 5 almonds depicting delight, fertility, well being, prosperity and prolonged existence.

As time has changed, so has the option for wedding favour has changed. Although the sugared almonds are still among the choice but few other things have been added to the list namely edible favours, candles, bottle stoppers, key rings and soaps. Various shapes, sizes, and colors of favours are given and these reflect the individuality of the bride and groom.

However, it is said that before counting on the favours for the D day; such things must be opted for that is a memento of the special day. A survey showed that when people are asked about their experience as a wedding guest, the top three answers that one receive is the couple, venue and the wedding favour. Thus, it can be calculated how important these are.

Donâ€™t overlook these and not even underestimate them. While choosing them makes sure that your choice encapsulates the event noticeably and succinctly. If one has a pre defined color theme in mind, make sure you shop for the same in order to show consistency of mind. If one has a very distinct theme as in like the James Bond theme, then count on the wedding favours that are sophisticated and are available in black or white color. If the occasion you have planned is simple and supple then count on the gift that is plain and elegant as in like calla lily gel candle. And, if you want all to remember the day then, give them a memento which is stamped with the couples name and the date.

One more thing to remember is that when the guests enter the venue for the first time, these give the guest a feel of immense pleasure and table where these favours are kept are professional and show-stopping. If you have decided to give favours then give to everyone, donâ€™t make partial decisions and if it is getting out of budget then donâ€™t give to anyone. These are the symbols of great get together and remark the day as a remembrance that would be long lived in the hearts of all.
