The environment; how we must hate it. With little being done to quench the consuming thirst for the worldâ€™s natural resources, it seems that weâ€™re heading for a particularly bleak and uninviting future. That said, in the early twentieth century, with smog levels are their highest, concerns were taken to lessen the pollutants that billowed from the metal rear ends of our transportation methods.

Despite being only really installed in cars in the 1970s when new, more rigorous emission control regulations began to take a firm hold on the automotive industry, the catalytic convertor was in fact invented by the French mechanical engineer Eugene Houdry in the 1950s.

All modern cars are now fitted with a catalytic convertor, and placed close to the exhaust the catalytic convertor they remove the hydrocarbons which are found in a cold engine. The catalytic convertor works to convert certain toxic chemicals into less environmentally threatening substances. Known as â€˜three-way convertorsâ€™ the catalytic convertor helps to remove the three most prevalent pollutants, the carbon monoxide, unburned hydrocarbons and the oxides found in nitrogen.

Specialising in a number of catalytic convertor types, Cats 2 U are a company who pride themselves on their high quality level of service. With 90% of their catalytic convertor range coming with a free fitting kit, their next day delivery and minimum 2 years warranty sets Cats 2 U apart from the rest.

As well as their catalytic convertors, Cats 2 U are also well placed to provide you with a custom build service, allowing a number of diesel particulate filters to be made which are capable of being fitted to the exact specifications of your vehicle.
