Harley-Davidson: the Story Behind an Icon in Salt Lake City

by Claudio Mccarty

Article published on April 27th 2012 | Auto

If youâ€™re looking to rent or own a motorcycle, whether new or used, Salt Lake City provides more than enough automobile rental shops to choose from. And among the many brands on display, itâ€™s not surprising if a Harley-Davidson catches your eye. Noted for its superior quality and unquestionably impressive look, Harley-Davidson has, over the years, redefined how people look at road trips.

The Harley-Davidson was originally a police motorcycle first used in Detroit in 1908. The law enforcers recognized the tactical advantage provided by such maneuverable vehicle and, since then, gradually developed it reputation and popularity. Prior to World War I, 20,000 of these motorcycles were created for quick dispatch of messages â€“ that was, of course, before the advent of radio communication. Harley-Davidson proved its value as military tool, and some of them were innovated with sidecars which could be fitted with machine-gun mounts.

By the 1920â€™s, Harley-Davidson became the biggest motorcycle manufacturer in the world. However, due to the absence of speed limits, highway fatalities skyrocketed. This led the Harley-Davidson to be involved in helping the law enforcement curb traffic accidents. Owing to the fact that Harley-Davidsons were faster and more maneuverable than most cars, took advantage of that to chase after speeders. Towards the late 1920â€™s, 3,000 police departments and government agents used the Harley-Davidson.

In the 1930â€™s this police motorcycle continued to support national campaigns for traffic safety. They created the 3-wheel Servi-Car which became very popular with police departments for traffic parking and enforcement, becoming the brand standard for 41 years. During World War II and in the 1950â€™s, 88,000 Harley-Davidsons were produced.

Soon after, the motor company branched out to personal motorcycles which offered civilians the opportunity to have their own Harley-Davidson. Today, any established motorcycle rental Utah residents trust offers this brand, alongside many others, for their customers. Those who want to rent a Harley-Davidson must be at least 21 years of age and must possess a valid driverâ€™s license. Most importantly, the rider must have the knowledge and ability to operate this heavyweight motorcycle.

For road trips aboard a motorcycle Salt Lake City offers riders accessible destinations to explore. Motor enthusiasts can also request for a ride planner to participate in local events. If one is not confident that he can handle a Harley-Davidson, he can inquire at his local Utah dealer for riding lessons or alternative motorcycles.

The motorcycles for sale in Utah are new and pre-owned. Buyers can take a look at a huge inventory of units on display and narrow down their choices. If you want to settle for a Harley-Davidson, you can read more about it online at its official site. Log on to harley-davidson.com/en_US/Content/Pages/home.html for details.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/auto-articles/harley-davidson-the-story-behind-an-icon-in-salt-lake-city.htm - Article Side

Claudio Mccarty - About Author:
For more details, search a motorcycle rental Utah, a motorcycle Salt Lake City, and a motorcycles for sale in Utah in Google for related information.

Article Keywords:
motorcycle rental utah, motorcycle salt lake city, motorcycles for sale in utah

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!