As a travel writer I am often asked about the mode of travel that I prefer. Owing to my love for road travel, mostly my reply is that I fancy a long travel by public transport or by my own car. But in the recent time as population has exceedingly increased on the roads and commuting by public transport is becoming a nasty affair, my inclination has increased towards finding alternatives and the best one that I have come up with is travelling by air. Given below is an account of my travel across India and my verdict on what your choice should be while you plan your travel.

I travel a lot from New Delhi to other Indian cities and most of my travels take me to Mumbai. As I took up to travelling by air I got to experiment with many government and private airlines and hence I got to learn the pros and cons of each. But I have also found that New Delhi to Mumbai Air India flights are the best among the rest and travelling in them would surely increase your pride as a valued customer. The reasons behind my bold statement are mentioned in the following paragraphs.

It all starts with reserving the tickets and Air India online services work the best. You do not have to reload the pages once they open and ticketing work a lot faster than most of the private airline websites. Then moving on to boarding details and ad hoc cancelling of your ticket, going by my experience I have never faced any issue when they have annulled by ticket without my prior permission. On the other hand, private airlines are notorious for such activities wherein you would go to board your flight and your name would be missing from the checklist.

New Delhi to Mumbai Air India flights have always been a hot favorite of mine among all other of my travels. Another reason for such adulation is that the flights are never delayed and it is rare that you would be late in reaching your destination when you are travelling by Air India. Funded by the government of India, this airline was sure caught in controversies lately but due to their commitment towards their customers the clouds dispersed soon. Air India online services and the flights are truly a benchmark in serving customers.
