Whole Life Insurance Policy

Life Insurance purchase is a necessity today rather than a luxury expense. Every individual is looking to acquire a Life Insurance Policy to protect his loved ones in the event of his death or leaving him incapacitated to do a regular work. There are mainly two types of insurance policies that include Term life insurance policy and Whole life insurance policy. The main difference between a term life insurance policy and a whole life is that the whole life insurance lasts for the lifetime of the incurred whereas term life lasts only for the defined term.Whole Life Insurance, or Whole Life Insurance policy. A whole life insurance is a method to build up wealth since the premium paid by the insured adds to equity growth in a savings account where tax-deferred dividends is allowed to build-up for the person. This type of insurance contract has both life cover as well as investment component to it. The whole life insurance policyâ€™s insurance component pays to the insured a prescribed sum upon the death of the person; while the investment component keeps on accumulating a cash value that the policyholder can withdraw or borrow against for future emergency. The whole life insurance thus acts as a flexible money-saving instrument that empowers you to mount up wealth to be used for any purpose including buying a new car, retiring comfortably and also get your children married.
