5 Steps to Great Senior Portraits by David Zwick

Article published on May 22nd 2012 | Photography

Before you know it, you will be headed into your senior year of high school and it will be time to select a senior photographer for your senior photography. Here are five quick tips to get you started in the right direction.

First, look at lots of senior portraits online and in magazines and decide what kind of senior portraits YOU want. Set the bar high then go about searching your area for a senior photographer that fits.

Second, start early. Start planning and evaluating the senior photographers in your area as soon as possible. You can never start too soon and you may be able to get some good deals. Many senior photographers offer specials for having your senior portraits done early, the sooner you book your senior photography, the greater the savings.

Third, donâ€™t feel pressured to use the schoolâ€™s contracted senior photographer. Itâ€™s simple for y be in the schoolâ€™s yearbook. Most senior photographers you find to work with submit photos to all area schools or will give you the image so you can submit it to your school.

Fourth, plan a visit. Visit any studio you are interested in for your senior portraits. Meet the senior photographer who will be taking your senior portraits. Look at the senior photography they have taken. Youâ€™ll quickly determine which of all the senior photographers are best suited to your taste.

Fifth, be flexible in terms of location. Donâ€™t limit yourself geographically when choosing a senior photographer. Donâ€™t hesitate to drive a little farther for the senior portraits you want. After all, your senior photography is a once in a lifetime event.

Last, once you have your senior portraits taken, be throughly satisfied. If you are not telling the photographer what he or she missed and ask for a reshoot. Your senior portraits are a once in a lifetime experience. You should have exactly what you want.
