Roger Hamilton and the Concept of Natural Flow by Corwin Smith

Article published on December 12th 2011 | Business

Once in a while it happens in every field of operation that man is involved in. Somebody stands up and tells the mandarins in that field that all along they had been wrong and that they had been professing something grievously wrong to the people who had been involved in that field. And not only that, they had been harming the interests of the people who had been indirectly involved with that field. Something similar happened in the domain of wealth creation. And the man who had shown the clearest of mirrors to the experts and the mandarins of this field is Roger Hamilton.

And this was bound to happen. The repetitive recessions and depressions that the world has been witnessing in the economy have proven that the present set of theories and principles are not up to the mark. In fact it can be rightly said that the present system was not at all the right or the perfect system to be given such a high importance. It was left to Roger Hamilton to undo the wrong that had been done to the world economy and the individual lives at large. And Roger did everything that he could in order to make sure that the right picture of wealth and the right methods of wealth creation are introduced to the world.

The theory of wealth dynamics has already proven to the inquiring minds that the concept of wealth creation is incomplete without incorporating the all pervasive and the all powerful nature into it. And the theory of wealth dynamics comprehensively proves that by introducing the concept of natural flow of a human being. The concept of natural flow refers to the natural inclination of the human being that is almost hidden beneath the layers of greed and the desire for aggrandizement. But Roger Hamilton in his theory of wealth dynamics has made sure that every human being who is looking forward to find the real meaning of wealth creation and is also willing enough and courageous enough to make those changes as asked by the theory of wealth dynamics reaches where he wants to reach.

Once an individual has decided to make that change and follow the dictums of this path breaking theory the very first thing that would happen is that he would be introduced to his natural flow. Roger Hamilton has very carefully devised one of the most efficient personality test called the wdprofile test that would apprise the human being about his own natural being or in other words reintroduce that individual to him. And once that happen the path of his wealth creation would reveal it to him.
