Cranes are some of the most important pieces of equipment on any construction site, often relied upon to lift large weights and carry out heavy duty work, but the cost of buying cranes brand new can be off putting for construction firms looking for new devices.

Opting for used cranes instead of brand new cranes could be a much more cost effective option, and if the right used cranes are bought buyers can be sure of getting brilliant performance and durability.

If you are interested in buying used cranes then safety should be a top priority and you should ensure that any used cranes you invest in have been thoroughly tested and that they are in a good working condition. As well as this, used cranes should be comprehensively repaired should they need to be, to ensure they can be used in the same way as new devices.

Our used cranes are available in a variety of weight tolerances and options, from one tonne to 150 tonne SWL, and our largest used cranes have spans of up to 40 metres.
