A Court Reporter also referred to as Court Stenographer, Stenotype Operator, Shorthand Operator, Voice Writing Reporter or Law Reporter is a person who is responsible for transcribing recorded or spoken speech into written form using various kinds of machines and equipments such as shorthand or voice writing equipments to produce official transcripts of court hearings, depositions as well as other official proceedings. There are some differences in stenographic court reporters and voice writing court reporters. The differences are in the methods they use to making the record. A voice writerâ€™s main aim is to repeat verbatim, what witnesses, attorneys and others are saying in a proceeding. Most of voice writers are not trained properly, instead of that they use to learn it during the job. On the other side, Stenographers are professionally trained and their training duration is two to four years. Their training program includes Latin, English, law, business and typing.
