Donâ€™t Let Wholesale Deals Scam Rumors Ruin Your Business Prospects

By Brad Smith

Article published on March 29th 2012 | Business

A number of dropshippers and wholesalers who have been researching Wholesale Deals online have come across rumors of a Wholesale Deals scam. This is an unfortunate thing for a number of different reasons. For one thing, these are dishonest statements cooked up by disgruntled competitors. The internet allows people to spread these kinds of falsehoods to try and tarnish the image of a company. Apart from being completely untrue, these rumors can also ruin fabulous business opportunities for many wholesalers and dropshippers. To better understand this, letâ€™s take a look at the current scenario in the dropship and wholesale industry.

Fair Business?

While the internet has made a large part of the wholesale industry easier and more accessible for entrepreneurs, it has also made things easier for scamsters too. You donâ€™t have to go very far to hear horror stories of buyers who have been taken in by middlemen or fraudulent outfits who either donâ€™t deliver on their promises or simply skip town with the buyerâ€™s hard-earned money. In many cases, it is next to impossible to track these scamsters down, since they usually operate via email addresses and cell phone numbers. Those who claim that there is a Wholesale Deals scam conveniently forget that the company has a stringent policy regarding verification. They simply will not deal with suppliers who canâ€™t be verified, thus providing a fair and level playing field for legitimate buyers and sellers to do business.

Before buying in the false rumors of a Wholesale Deals scam, itâ€™s also worth noting that the company has a lot of experience in the field. They are keenly aware of just how hard it can be to source lucrative products from legitimate suppliers. In fact, focusing on this one aspect of a dropship or wholesale business can be a 24 hour job. Wholesale Deals simplifies this entire process by offering buyers deal trackers from legitimate suppliers. Buyers can view all the information they need about the product, including how much it is selling for with other retailers. This allows buyers to focus on closing profitable deals, rather than spending hours and hours looking for the right product.

The Rumor Mill

In the current industry scenario, Wholesale Deals offers a rare opportunity to legitimate buyers and suppliers to connect and do business. This also means that unscrupulous dealers, scamsters, middlemen, and unverifiable suppliers donâ€™t have a chance to try and con people. This is precisely where the typical Wholesale Deals scam rumors begin. Shady competitors who have been losing business to Wholesale Deals have resorted to these kinds of smear campaign tactics in order to try and lure customers away. A number of fraudulent suppliers have also started rumors of Wholesale Deals scams since they cannot be included among the companyâ€™s list of verified suppliers.

Buyers who are still wary about the claims of a Wholesale Deals scam should note that the service has a money-back policy on its deal trackers. This means that the buyer has absolutely nothing to lose and everything to gain by trying it out.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/don-t-let-wholesale-deals-scam-rumors-ruin-your-business-prospects.htm - Article Side

Brad Smith - About Author:
Listening to false stories about a a Wholesale Deals scam could ruin the possibility of establishing lucrative business contacts within the community. Donâ€™t miss out on making profitable deals by listening to rumors of a Wholesale Deals scams.

Article Keywords:
wholesale deals scam, wholesale deals scams, wholesaledeals.co.uk scam, wholesaledeals.co.uk scams, wholesaledeals

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!