A ducted air conditioning system is suited for operation in large areas and the features of these systems are:

â€¢ Multiple units that can be controlled by single remote control â€¢ A filter equipped return air grill to remove household dust

â€¢ A compact and noise less outdoor unit

â€¢ Easily concealable small refrigerant pipes â€¢ A 24/7 timer that is fully functional â€¢ Indoor ducting units

â€¢ Modern controls based on microprocessor technology â€¢ Energy efficient heating or cooling units for whole area covered

The modern day technology has brought a lot of changes to these air conditioning systems. Unlike earlier days when they used to work on a fixed speed and took more time get the cooling done, these modern day ACâ€™s work on advance technology. These work like a car accelerator easily and quickly increasing or decreasing the speed of cooling when desired. The result is a faster, more efficient and uninterrupted cooling.

The aerodynamically built fans make sure that you get a noise-free cooling. Some systems come with hot start technology. What this means is that the system will not start heating unless it reaches a temperature to ensure the warmest air coming out of it to avoid any cold drafts.

You can adjust the systemâ€™s mode and these auto adjust themselves according to various outdoor and indoor conditions giving you relaxing and comfortable environment. These are able to perform well even in the most extreme temperature ranges.

The most important aspect is energy efficiency. These days the smarter breed of cooling systems consumes much lesser amount of energy as compared to the older systems. The modern systems equipped with inverter based technology are not only energy savers but are more quite and economical than the conventional ones. The outdoor component makes it possible to vary the speed of input and output so as to get maximum um efficiency. The best part is that these can be customized to your requirements.

Why these systems are so popular is because they are best suited for ultimate comfort providing. The flexibility with which these systems can operate makes them a perfect choice for complete house cooling.
