Every time the likes of a Showtime or Starz manages to get a huge hit on its hands by Xiaojuan

Stock up: Nucky Thompson. He's successfully selling his imported Irish Whiskey, niftily disguised it as Feeney's Irish Oats, all over town. It's a premium product that sells for $30 dollars a case, less than half the going rate. Also, his plan to throw Atlantic City into chaos by urging Chalky White to get the black workers to strike, thereby turning up the heat on Darmody, is working to perfection. On Rothstein's recommendation, he got himself a slick new lawyer with a propensity for bribing judges, and even though Nucky doesn't have the money for pay-offs now, he will soon, thanks to all those whiskey proceeds.

Holding steady: Nelson Van Alden. He was served with divorce papers in the mail from his wife after the sordid baby incident with Lucy. It might be time for him to turn up the charm and seduce his mail-order nanny. On the plus side, the federal prosecutor is finally taking him seriously as a witness against Nucky Thompson. Specifically, she plans to press for murder charges in Hans Schroeder's death, based on Van Alden's investigation.
