A substantial number of countries all over the world have made it compulsory for bikers to wear protective equipments like helmets and jackets. The bike riders wear jackets that are usually made of leather or nylon or also Kevlar. These are designed to protect regions of shoulders, spine and elbows with the help of heavy padding. Other than leather, man-made textiles are also used to make them. These offer various advantages over and above the typical leather jackets. They provide protection from water, heat and cold weather. Pockets and vents in these provide additional utility.

Man made textile based biker jacket is made of materials which have a high density like thick nylon or blends of synthetic elastic fabric and Kevlar. An additional feature of these is that they also have in built waterproof liners. Apart from the use of synthetic materials used in textile clothing, waxed cotton having heavy weight age was most commonly put to use before modern textiles were developed. Modern styles of jackets are more stylish as compared to conventional ones. They are also a little shorter lengthwise. These are designed not only for men but for women as well. There are varieties available for women jackets also.

A biker must select the jacket by considering the purpose of its usage like the type of bike that has to be ridden, the speed required along with personal needs like comfort level, fondness of a particular material, etc. As it is known, the primary function of the jacket is protection. The thickness of the jacket indicates the protective ability of it. Nowadays, these are made to order as well. They can be customized as per the requirements of the biker. It is very necessary to wear a good quality jacket in order to attain maximum safety. Thus selecting a good brand is essential.

The latest kind of biker jacket is mesh motorcycle jackets. Thicker fibers as compared to others are used in these with an open weave. The gap created, allows air to flow easily and is ideal to be worn by those who face warm climatic conditions. Utmost protection is the main feature of these. The type of material used, the functionality and quality of these decide the price of this commodity. Bike riding is an adventurous and exciting sport and is best enjoyed with utmost safety and protection to the biker. Hence it is essential to wear these jackets along with helmets, armors and suitable boots.
