Are You a Good Candidate for an Executive MBA?

by Mentorindia

Article published on August 23rd 2012 | Education

Executive MBA Students need a high amount of motivational drive and ambitious attitude to attain success in their chosen field. These are the few qualities which separate them from the competition and help them in excelling in the professional arena.

Let's discuss a few points which can help you in ascertaining if you are a good candidate for an executive MBA program.

1) Your Educational Background: It is not necessary that all the professionals enrolling for the program should have the same or similar backgrounds. Their background can vary widely. The Bachelor's degree earned by them can be from different fields like engineering, law, medicine, management and many more.

2) Work Experience: Executive MBA course content heavily depends upon the previous experience students have in their field. The main eligibility factor which each aspirant has to fulfill is to have a minimum of 5 years continuous work experience in a managerial role from a renowned organization. Any significant achievement in the work history is a boost for your capability to perform well in the intensive MBA program.

3) Current Employment Status: The Learners experience in their management field helps them to easily grasp the knowledge and skills imparted in classroom teaching and they can utilize them in real life work scenarios which enables them to work efficiently. Some organizations encourage their managers to participate in such executive level management programs. Support can be in any form or monetary help or lessening the workload to enable the enrollees to cope up with the studies. In return sponsoring companies get a pool of successful executive MBA students which builds the management team for better organization development.

4) Career Objectives: It is very important that one should be clear in his thought about their career goals and objective. Only then you can decide if the high profile executive program fits in your scheme of things and whether it is going to be fruitful. One should be aware of how they will be going to use the knowledge and skill learned in such program to meet their career objectives and further their career. Do you wish to be part of the Top management in your organization? Or You Want to start your own business venture? All this will give you clear vision on selecting the right course for you and also help in achieving your career goals.

5) Your Attitude in Life: An Executive MBA student needs to have high energy, a drive to attain high in career and a never say die attitude which separates them from other students. Typically an executive MBA student will be the one who leads and has a pro-active attitude in taking up the responsibilities in team projects.

People with creativity, distinctive strengths and a thoughtful thinking personality can be successful in such programs.

Get to know more about Executive MBA Programs and Executive Programs in India with us.

Article Source:

http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/are-you-a-good-candidate-for-an-executive-mba.htm - Article Side

Mentorindia - About Author:
Contact Priyanka for a Executive MBA Programs . Get in touch for more details about a Executive Programs in India . Visit a http://www.mentorindia.com/

Article Keywords:
Executive Programs

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!