Article Side

History Dissertation Prize â€“ Criteria and Purpose of Prizing the Deserving Students by Donna Santos

Article published on February 8th 2012 | Education

Do you think your hard work deserves a reward?

If so, here is a chance to prove your perspicacity to the authorities

Want to know the criteria and purpose of prizing?

Research writing asks for excellent writing skills. To gain good grades you ought to have better language, grammar, and spellings. Many students fail in doing this because they fail to master the art of writing and speaking good English. Ultimately, they face a lot of trouble in writing their paper.

History dissertation prize:

Some students write such theses that are worth praising a million times. Their research, introduction, topic sentence, way of putting their argument, language and writing format, and style and presentation is outstanding. For such students institutes arrange prizing and award ceremonies. In such events, they motivate and praise the students for their hard work.

Criteria of prizing:

The awards are based on either practice based courses or theory based courses. Such contests are usually carried out in UK. Students registered with an institute, or appearing privately, both can participate. They have certain conditions which the students have to accept for participating in the context. Those conditions are as follows:

Student is original work: the student should conduct original research and collect mature information on the theme of his paper.

Research: the student is research should be comprehensive and should include primary information as well as secondary information.

Method of research: this should clearly state the method you have used for conducting your research.

Writing: your content should be properly structured and contain correct format and style of writing.

Students are awarded with a certain sum of money starting from the minimum amount of Â£500 in UK. These contexts are carried out in certain fields of the subject.

Purpose of the prizing context:

The purpose of organizing such a context is to promote that field of study, so that more students are motivated to take educational carriers in this field. There are so many branches of every subject. And as the time passes, a branch of a subject starts loosing importance, and the number of students taking that subject gradually decreases.

So in that case, universities distribute certain awards in that particular subject, so that students are motivated to take that subject up. It is also a source of motivation for devoting more time in research relating to this field and further success.

Students work so hard on their research paper. There has been a dissertation history of prizing. Universities reward their deserving students with first and second awards. This reward is a compliment to their hard work. Not all countries offer their master students with this opportunity. Only some, like UK, are giving their students this honor.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/history-dissertation-prize-criteria-and-purpose-of-prizing-the-deserving-students.htm - Article Side

Donna Santos - About Author:
Donna Santos is a senior research writer and provides help for a history dissertation prize and a dissertation history of.Feel free to contact for any sort of help in this regard.

Article Keywords:
history dissertation prize, dissertation history of

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!