Schools are definitely the place for learning and knowledge. Schooling is almost ranging for about 6 months with the least and the longest will be when we get old. That is the rule and time range for going to school, but how will it be nice if the students can learn great knowledge in just two days or a weekend.

Weekend schooling is most exclusive in the Melbourne Film School in Australia and the main reason is that many aspiring students want to be a part of the film industry but still have works to do. The two days of learning will be from morning until night and limited numbers of students are only welcomed for the course so that all of the students can maximize their learning in the two days that will be held for the film course.

The teacher is also a big advantage for the students because of the great knowledge that the mentor can share for the students. The mentor that is said is Colm Oâ€™ Murchu and with his great knowledge in film making that has been gathered for more than a decade. He is willing to share the knowledge to the students and will give huge focus on teaching the students that give him a huge respect and trust by entering in the school.

The things that will be learned in the school are not just limited because almost everything that the students have to learn will be discussed to them. Unlike the other school that only focuses on single course but the Melbourne Film School will give all of the significant learning that a film maker should learn. The lesson will not just focus on directing knowledge, not on the skills of the film editor but all of the things that are needed to learn like the angles needed in the film, the sounds and lights in the film and other skills and knowledge.

Equipments will also be discussed in the two days of learning because those are also essential in the field of film making. The camera has been the main eye in the film and many film makers are still not familiar in the camera angles and that is what Colm wants to be improved to the next generation film makers. Another is the music and lights that are needed in a film. Good music and lighting always captures the feeling exerted and shown in the film that is made and that is another thing why music and lights must not be ignored in the film making.

Many things are needed to consider in the process of film making and the Weekend schooling may be a great advantage or a disadvantage depending on the people who will look in to the offer that is given. Over all the weekend schooling that the Melbourne Film School is only an option for the students to have and if they are willing to learn in the two days of film making.
