The Thrilling Action of Monster Energy Supercross by Harry110

Article published on December 16th 2011 | Entertainment

A supercross sport is derived from the sports of Motocross and in many respects they both are similar. There are significant differences such as, Supercross tracks are quite technical and tough, though theyâ€™re not fast as Motocross yet the difficulty level is quite high and also the risk of injury is a part of this game. Secondly Supercross races are heavily advertised event in major cities. Itâ€™s a thrilling game. Anything can happen at any turn. Anyone can take the leap at any step. Most of the Supercross races are held in baseball or football stadiums with artificially-made mud tracks. The name of this event â€œSupercrossâ€• was selected when the first organized motocross race was successfully held inside a stadium in the United States. In 1972, a 16 years old racer â€œMarty Trips won the event while the contest featured many of the top motocross riders of the time. Michael Goodwin, a racing promoter called the event â€œSuper Bowl of Motocrossâ€• in Los Angeles Coliseum in Los Angeles, California. This event was a huge commercial success that it spawned many imitators and so the event was given a name of Supercross to identify the similarity of this event with Motocross.

Modern Supercross races are governed by motorcycle association; the leading organization in United States is called American Motorcycling Association (AMA) and/or the THQ series of Supercross championship events. The AMA series usually starts in late December and continues till the mid-May, consisting 17 rounds in the Supercross class and 8 rounds in Supercross. If thereâ€™s rain in the forecast, the riders will be racing in the mud and the main event will be reduced to 10 laps in the Supercross lites class and 15 laps in the Supercross class. When it comes to the Supercross motorcycle racing, it is often difficult to locate its exact date and venue. Supercross racing is a digression of Motocross racing. Cheap Monster Energy Supercross tickets can be bought from thebigtickets site. The only difference between the two is that motocross races take place outdoors, while Supercross racing shows are held in-house. In the starting of 17s, motocross racing started taking the world and racing fans by tempest. The only difficulty with motocross racing was that this event was held outside in rural regions. This mainly restricted the figure of fans that could take pleasure in a motocross match so the event was switched to in-house.

The first Supercross racing match was held in Los Angeles at Coliseum. Though, at that time it was not formally recognized as Supercross racing. Motorcycle racing initially started on dirt tracks. Later on, dirt tacks became tarmac tracks. As they wanted enthusiasm therefore, Supercross motorcycle racing took birth. That difference was between motocross and the Super bowl thatâ€™s the Supercross name was used. Supercross and motocross still live today. That was why the name Supercross was so popular and extensively worn.
