Neurosurgery in India which is often called as neurological surgery refers to a medical science dealing with diagnosis, treatment, rehabilitation and prevention of any kind of disorder which tends to affect the entire nervous system. The nervous system includes brain, spinal cord, peripheral nerves, spinal column and extra-cranial cardiovascular system in a body. In Western countries neurosurgery costs 7 to 8 times more than that in India. There are many international patients coming to India for this surgery as they are paying thousands of dollars for it in their own country and still are in waiting list. Neurosurgery in India is offered at a very less price as compared to other western countries and with no waiting list.

As one can imagine, any surgery in body organs is extremely delicate and must be performed in pin-point accuracy. Neurosurgery in India is also among serious surgery and needs lots of attention and precaution. With today's technology, many surgeons will prefer to perform minimally invasive surgery over the more traditional method of "open surgery" in which it may be necessary to perform incisions in different parts of body. This new method is very effective and helps in fast recovery. Because of less incision in body it let patients heal remarkably.

As travel means have improved enormously in the past few decades combined with the fact that people are just a click away from acquiring any information they are seeking on the internet, medical tourism is not only a desired option but also a logical solution.
