Roger James Hamilton and the Introduction of Man to Nature by Corwin Smith

Article published on January 10th 2012 | Business

How many times have you stood in front of a flowing river that is making its way through the stones lying here and there and almost every where. And how many times have you stood in front of a mountain that is drowned in snow right till the middle and then the trees and the bushes and almost everything that a mountain can show is revealed. How many times have you stood in front of a tree admiring its beauty? Quite often, but one thing is for sure that you have really missed the point somewhere in between. And that point was understood by the genius of a man named Roger James Hamilton.

Every time you look at the marvels of nature, it is not that you are looking at something that is separate from you. In fact you are looking at your own reflection. And that is the point that Roger James Hamilton is really trying the people to understand. And the irony is that Roger belongs to a field that is completely devoid of emotions as well as feelings. He belongs to the field of wealth creation that really does not look left or right but straight in the eye when it comes to counting the losses and the profits earned.

It becomes really important to comprehend the reason behind the observation of this man named Roger James Hamilton as far as the beauty of the nature and the understanding of the oneness of the nature that is being observed by the man and the nature itself. But what is more important is the fact that Roger has used this observation in the development of his own theories on wealth creation. And this is the surprising fact.

Here is one man Roger James Hamilton who is combining one thing that is really materialistic and the other thing that is completely metaphysical. But if you would go though his theories like that of wealth dynamics, and wealth spectrum then the best thing that you would be able to understand is that there is no difference between the nature that we see outside and the natural flow that we carry within ourselves. And once the outer faÃ§ade that we all build up around ourselves is broken and the real natural flow regains its lost territory then the best thing that would happen to us is that we would be able to establish a relation with the nature itself. And the thing that would automatically happen is that the path that we should be following to make sure that we get success in creating wealth would become clear to us.
