Roger Hamilton and the Lighthouse with the Ethereal Light by Corwin Smith

Article published on February 25th 2012 | Advertising

Light house is a well known entity in the places where the sea is stormy and the ships that are moving in towards the harbor need a sign that everything is safe before they reach the shore. Although the technology has advanced to such a level that the primitive things like lighthouses are no more required, yet there are places, particularly in the northern sea where the technology is sometimes not able to penetrate the power of nature, it is then that these light houses play the most important role in making sure that the ships whether passenger ships or the merchant ships reach the shores safely. Myriad of enchanting stories have been written on the lighthouses that have endeared the people of all age groups, from children to grownups, to the elderly. But one light house that is a brainchild of one of the most creative of geniuses of our times is concerned with the aspect of wealth creation. And the man behind the construction of this lighthouse with one of the most splendid and powerful beacons is Roger Hamilton.

It might seem quite awkward that the term lighthouse that has some of the most endearing of mysteries and stories and legends associated with it, has now been associated with something that is as merciless and ruthless as the most savages of rulers. But then this is the beauty of Roger Hamilton. He on his own journey of discovering the real meaning of wealth creation realized that the very savageness that is associated with the term wealth creation is responsible for many of the failures of the men and women who deserved the wealth that they desired. And that savageness in the concept of wealth creation could only have been decimated with the introduction of the most benevolent and the most ethereal of entities called Nature. And he did this in his own style and his own ways. He constructed the lighthouse of wealth creation that has levels that tell the real seekers of wealth what they had been missing all along in their quest for wealth was that benevolent touch.

Once the seeker of wealth enters this lighthouse of wealth creation and starts his own journey of wealth seeking and begins crossing one level after another within the light house, he would realize that it is not the wealth earning abilities that he has learned. But the real discovery has been the realization of the ethereal real being running deep inside of him that if allowed taking control of his life would give him everything that he deserves. And that is the gift of Roger Hamilton.
