Your car is like your best friend; it will stay with you for a very long time if you treat it much care and respect. Likewise, proper maintenance and modern technology can help you save a lot of money on auto repairs. Know these basic auto care tips to keep your automobile running for a long time.

First, read your automobileâ€™s userâ€™s manual. Some car parts need to be replaced when they reach certain mileage; others are replaced depending on the time they were installed. Find out what the manufacturers specifically recommend, and come up with a system so you wonâ€™t forget whenever routine maintenance procedures need to be carried out.

Have an emergency fund for your car and resist the urge to spend it on something else. Take aside small amounts of money and do not touch it until the day comes when you need to use it for emergency repairs or accidents. Keep in mind that a repair fund will actually cost less than paying for a new automobile.

Next, set up a little auto repair cycle which will inform you of what you should do next. For example, you can renew your car registration every January, followed by an oil change in February, then other detailing services or retouches during March, etc. Take note of seasonal changes too like preparing for the winter or summer so you can add safety and comfort enhancements accordingly.

Keep yourself updated by constantly reading your car manufacturerâ€™s webpage. You can also joint car-specific forums online to keep up to date about car parts, new vehicle trends, new parts or add-ons, and which BMW repair NJ based store to get them from in case your Beemer ever needs replacement parts.

Train your eyes and especially your ears to spot weird noises and sounds emitted from the engine, air conditioner, or even the stereo. Likewise, be keen enough to detect smells like burning clutches or the smell of gasoline in your car. At some point, ask a friend to take it for a spin to detect any defects or subtle changes that you may have overlooked. This way, you can easily determine if you need to take your Beetle or Golf to a Volkswagen repair NJ based shop.

Finally, never settle for cheap parts and quick fixes. Always go for quality VW parts NJ Volkswagen models deserve, if you drive one. The least you can settle for are generic auto parts certified by the Certified Automotive Parts Association or CAPA.
