Article Side

The Benefits of a Home Security System that Offers a Mobile App

by William Hauselberg

Article published on February 20th 2012 | Home Security

The average person today spends less time at home than ever before. Many people's lives are filled with work obligations, furtherance of education, children's extracurricular activities and social events. This can create a dangerous situation in regards to your home security. If burglars know that you will not be around to protect your assets, they are more likely to break in. One way to combat this problem is to install a home security system that provides a mobile app. Mobile apps can be used in a variety of ways to protect your home and notify you of any dangers.

Android Security Mobile Apps

If you are looking for a great home security app android features many reliable options. The Android app allows you to arm and disarm your system. You can change the settings on your thermostat or adjust the lighting in your home by the push of a button. You can also remotely lock all of the doors on your property in case you forget to do so before leaving the home. You also have access to a history of alarm events and security system data, including when the alarm was activated, who deactivated it and if certain doors were accessed.

Security Camera Video Streaming

If you have video cameras installed in your home, a mobile app will allow you to view the footage from these machines. You can watch live feed through your Android phone or other phones. You can also view clips that are stored in the system's memory. This can help you check on older children that are left at home, as well as provide you with a way of monitoring the actions of any house workers, such as contractors, cleaning staff, lawn maintenance personnel or pool cleaners.

Receiving Notifications with a Mobile App

If you are looking for a way to receive notifications through a home security app, Android has you covered. With its app, you can receive an instant text message or email that you have set up for notification. You can receive notifications in the event of a fire, the presence of smoke, freezing pipes or if your home is flooding. You can also receive information notifying you if the alarm has been deactivated or if a particular door has been accessed, including the front door, a medicine cabinet door or a gun case door.

People lead busy lives, but they shouldn't be afraid to live their life because they are worried about the security of their homes. A mobile app can help people go about their business without worrying about their home.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/home-security-articles/the-benefits-of-a-home-security-system-that-offers-a-mobile-app.htm - Article Side

William Hauselberg - About Author:
The author has an immense knowledge on a home security app android. Know more about a home security related info in his website.

Article Keywords:
home security, home security app android

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!