In Business for Yourself But Not by Yourself: Lead Generation in a Franchise by Jamshaid Hashmi

Article published on March 23rd 2012 | Internet Business

Lead generation, especially online lead generation, is the bane of many businesses out there. The lionâ€™s share of business income is the result of an established client base, but how does a business get those new clients? Fortunately, with a WSI franchise, half of the problem is on its way to being solved.

From all over the world, there are clients who have already experienced the benefits of WSIâ€™s online solutions; so the foundation for word-of-mouth promotion is out there. By opening a WSI franchise, we can provide you with our resources for generating client leads. There will, of course, still be some additional networking efforts for attracting new local clients. At the same time, however, the very nature of a franchise means youâ€™re taking advantage of a great deal of ground work thatâ€™s already been laid out for you in advance.

Thus, our franchisees can focus on the second part of lead generation, which is lead nurturing. Remember how we said that most revenue comes from established clients? Thatâ€™s because the clients trust the organization in question, and that trust can be solidified with solid follow-through and repeated contact. WSI franchisees have a unique advantage at this part of the relationship. Local WSI Consultants are free to develop that personal touch at building their one-on-one client relationships.
