Article Side

Quite a Few Items That Web Designers Need to Know About Domain Names Registration

by Tracy Narvaez

Article published on March 28th 2012 | Internet Business

For people who have been thinking of having a personal or a business website there are certain things that you need to know and do from the onset. All pre-existing website owner did domain names registration before anybody was able to access their built websites. Hence, if you want people to have access to your website from anywhere in the world you will also need to do such registration.

Having a website is not all about building a website. You will need to register a domain name through which you will publish your built website. The organization that monitors web address registration is the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers with the acronym ICANN. They also accredit companies to sell web addresses.

In order not to be defrauded, you need to know if a particular company is accredited to sell web address before patronizing them. This can be achieved by checking the ICANN official website. It is important that you deal with accredited registrars directly and not through some agents. You may run a search over search engines for a list of accredited registrars

On an account that you have made a list of accredited registrars of web addresses, one that you should do is doing some background checks on the companies. This is to let you know what the terms of services of each of the companies and to know the company that is customer friendly. One way to achieve this is by visiting web-hosting forums to get credible information about various registrars.

Just after you have made a choice of an accredited web address registrar, you need to make list of web addresses for your business. The names should suit the purpose for which you are creating a website. The best web address that would go for your business is the business name. The alternative names are for cases where your desired name has been registered.

Now, you may go ahead to create an account with the web hosting company. While registering, ensure that you insert correct information about your company and the type of account that you would like to maintain. If you have any question, it is best to ask their support team as they are in the best place to answer any question.

However, if you the web name that you want to use have been registered and you really desire to use that name here is what you can do. Check if the name is available for sale. If it is for sale then you may place a bid to acquire it. If the name is not available for sale, you do not have further options than to use another web name.

Generally, the cost of domain names registration for an unused web name is between $10 and $30 every year. You need to know that the price will differ from one hosting company to the other. In contrast, the cost of buying of a registered web name is not stable. The price depends on the recognition of such name. Therefore, the name may range from one dollar to millions of dollars.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/internet-business-articles/quite-a-few-items-that-web-designers-need-to-know-about-domain-names-registration.htm - Article Side

Tracy Narvaez - About Author:
Learn everything there is to know about the a domain names registration process and find information about a leading Internet service provider at http://www.1webdesignstudio.net/domain-name.aspx now.

Article Keywords:
domain names registration

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!