Article Side

The Risk Factors of Home Based Online Jobs and Tips on How to Find a Genuine Job by Cody

Article published on March 12th 2012 | Internet Business

In a tight economic crunch like what we have today, people have been forced to look out for various money-making options. These days, technology and the medium of communication are so fast and the options are just endless. These days, regular office goers are looking for an additional source of earning in the weekends to tie between two ends. And house wives and retired people are also busy hunting for reliable make-money-from-home opportunities. As we all know, the moment we look for something, the first thing we do is go online and make a long and detailed research to know what kind of options are available.

While surfing the web, we see a lot of ads, each designed with the view of targeting a particular set of audience. The good thing is some of them do serve a purpose! People who surf the web regularly using any of the high-speed Internet connection services such as the one offered by Xfinity Internet would have come across a lot of ads of the home based job sites. The interesting thing is there are so many types of home based jobs. To my knowledge, the easiest of them is the paid surveys. All you need to do is answer a few simple questions about the services and products of various companies and you get paid for every survey you take up! And, there is another category of home based job in which you just have to log in to your user account and click on the links that they will be sending you every day. You get a few cents for each link you click on.

However, one big problem associated with the online home based jobs is, most of them charge you some money as an initial installment. They claim it is for the training kit and materials. Today, 80% of the online job portals are not genuine. After you have paid the initial membership amount, there are chances that they will not send you any work at all. Another thing to keep in mind is that, even if they are real the amount that you can expect from the online jobs is very less. So, are the online home based jobs good or bad? Are they trustworthy or not? Well, the response is mixed. There are still a few people who have managed to make a living from whatever they make from the online home based jobs.

So, what do you need to do to find a genuine online home based job? Given below are some of the things that you may keep in mind while looking for a genuine earn-from-home opportunity. Firstly, try to go for investment-free home based online jobs. After doing your own research on the websites about genuine home based jobs, you may take time to check out their previous payment proofs. If you feel, the amount that is mentioned on the pay slips is believable then you can go to any of the web browsers like Google or Yahoo and read the consumer reviews about that particular company or site.

Another thing you may do is, try to find people who are already making money by doing home based online jobs. It may be your friends, relatives or neighbor. Or you may even get the contact details of people from the review column and get in touch with them. Before asking them how to get membership, ask them about the nature of the work and how much potential is there and how much time do you have to spend every day for the work and things like that. Once you get to know all these things, then you can roughly calculate how much this work is going to help you in meeting your monthly expenses. These are some of the important things that you need to keep in mind while you are looking for a home based online job.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/internet-business-articles/the-risk-factors-of-home-based-online-jobs-and-

Cody - About Author:
Cody is a freelance writer and blogger. He writes on a wide range of topics encompassing entertainment, technology, environment, health, and self improvement. He enjoys the luxury of surfing the web with his high-speed Internet connection powered by a XFINITY Internet.

Article Keywords:
XFINITY Internet, XFINITY, Genuine Online Job

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!