North face arctic parka has recently surfaced as a popular winter-wear selling brand of North America. This brand offers a variety of winter outfits ranging from hooded jackets and coats to outdoor boots, sweat shirts and sweaters for both men and women belonging to different age groups. Jackets and coats are widely used products of this brand. Availability of different styles, simple colors of the garments that suits different occasions and instant warmth provided by these clothes are few reasons that make this brand popular.

Teenagers and middle aged women generally prefer North face arctic parka jackets that come in thigh length cuts. They are small sized and stop right above your knee. They affectively cover your waistline and complement your body contour. These jackets are lined with fur and insulated materials that prevent your body heat from flowing outside.

Men, on the contrary, prefer full-trimmed hooded jackets that are lined with faux fur or coyote fur to prevent cold winds and moisture from attacking you. Fur lining adds extra warmth to your body. Earlier manufacturers used rabbit fur as well however, due to active functioning of agencies that protect animal rights and declining number of furry animals, makers have started synthesizing synthetic furs for this purpose.
