Vehicle Wrapping and its Benefits by Jhonknes

Article published on June 21st 2012 | Advertising

For most of the marketing managers, cost effectiveness is turning out to be an important task in the current situation. Most of the marketing managers are thinking whether investing in a marketing strategy will bring about some best possible returns. Advertisement is an area, which can spiral out the costs suddenly to several thousand. Of the different advertisement methods, television advertising is turning out to be of higher cost and therefore most marketing managers are keeping themselves away from this type of advertising.

The objective behind any advertising campaign is to communicate about a service or product to the intended audience. Marketing managers of organizations strive hard to popularize their product or service in such a way that it can be noticed by the intended audience as against the product or service of the competitors. Of the different marketing techniques, the best option available for marketing managers is vehicle livery.

They also have the option of vehicle graphics wraps, wherein the vehicles of their organization can be completely or partially covered with colorful images. Wraps are carried out on vehicles through large sheets of printed material in which the product name or brand name of the company can be printed. A study reveals that an average vehicle driver spends a minimum of one month each year on his vehicle and the study also says that a vehicle is viewed by 3000 people each day and the cost per sighting for the advertiser in this form of advertisement can be as less as four pence.

In addition to cost benefit, another important benefit of vehicle livery is its longevity as compared to any other type of advertisement like print advertising and television or radio advertising, which is generally short-term in nature. A Vehicle graphics wrap can last up to five years thereby making it as the cost effective method of marketing. In short, vehicles in a company can act as moving billboards under this method of marketing. This method of advertising can enable the marketing managers to keep close track of the advertising budget of their organization and this form of advertising can act as one-time investment rather than any other methods of advertising.

There are specialist companies offering the service of vehicle wraps and livery and these companies are offering different forms of wraps like digitally printed vinyl wraps, 3M wrap color changes, etc... Before selecting such a service provider, companies looking for vehicle wrapping services can view the previous works of specialist wrappers.
