Many restaurant entrepreneurs have the same question when it comes to Restaurant furniture, â€œWhat is the best type of restaurant table to buy?â€• The answer depends of many factors of the restaurant which we will go over in this article.

When you are looking for a restaurant table one of the top factors is price. Some restaurant owners actually try to save money and build their own tables, which can be a risky proposition unless you have furniture making experience. These self-made tables usually end up being a pad attached to a piece of plywood with a linen tablecloth over it. This is actually called a padded banquet style table top, but the cost of having to wash the linens frequently is often overlooked. It becomes very expensive and time consuming while not being attractive to the customers.

When buying a table the restaurant owner or designer will usually have to decide on what level of durability, cost, and attractiveness they want for their restaurant tables. Reversible two sided table tops are a cheap option that is great for gas stations and smaller restaurants that donâ€™t care too much about the atmosphere that the restaurant generates. Because these table tops are made of flake board with laminate on both sides, the laminate can bubble over time if water gets through the surface. However, they are so cost effective that it is not a big deal to replace the table. In fact many restaurants put in larger orders of reversible table tops and just replace the ones that are too old when the time comes.

To make a statement with your restaurant furniture, you have a choice a few different restaurant tables. A resin table top comes with many different wood grains and many different colors which can be customized to your restaurantâ€™s atmosphere. They are very easy to clean and you just have to make sure that the smallwares used in your restaurant will not chip or scratch the tableâ€™s surface.

For a high durability restaurant table you can use a custom laminate table top. These table tops can use any laminates on their surface such as Formica or Wilsonart. These are typically the most durable restaurant table tops and used in any fast food establishments.

The last of the Restaurant tables we will go over are the wood table tops. These look very impressive and will make your restaurant feel like a high-end establishment. However, most of the wood veneer table tops have the issue of rings on the table top if a plate or cup that is too hot or too cold is placed directly on the wood. To prevent this make sure to use coasters for your cups and place something under extremely hot plates.
