Chances are that you will have come across rubber chippings before. Best described as small fragments of the rubber mulch which are bought in large quantities and then thrown on the floor or ground, these have become very popular in recent years. With that in mind here is a brief introduction to rubber chippings and their applications:

Rubber chippings are versatile enough to be used in a number of applications. Perhaps the most popular is in surfaces designed specifically for use for physical activities. All sorts of man-made sports pitches require the addition of rubber mulch in order to add some spring to the surface. Childrensâ€™™ play areas are also commonly covered with rubber chippings to make the ground softer in the event of a fall. In other words the softness and spring of rubber mulch makes it ideal as a material for putting on the ground.

Artificial grass is perhaps the most common of locations for rubber chippings. All-weather surfaces such as football pitches, bowling greens and equestrian arenas are among the usual suspects. The latter are particularly common as everything from training surfaces to show jumping venues need to be designed with the comfort and welfare of the animals in mind. If you are into competitive horse riding then you will therefore be no stranger to rubber chippings.

It is important that the pitches and areas described above are replenished with rubber chippings from time to time to make sure they have the right characteristics. Therefore it is necessary to have rubber mulch in abundance. Rubber chippings are relatively cheap so there is no reason not to have enough.

Where can I get hold of a good amount of rubber chippings?
