Asia, the largest continent on this earth, is a dynamic depiction of natural scenery. Filled with assorted wonderments, ranging from scenic beaches, impenetrable tropical forests to majestic snowy mountains, this giant landmass is a fantastic space for adventure buffs from across the globe. When it comes to trekking, Asia is non-to-second offering stunning opportunities to walkers and hikers of all abilities. If youâ€™re also the one whose boots are made to touch milestones, hereâ€™s list of top hiking places in Asia.

Kintamani, Bali: If you want one heck of wonderful Bali adventures, trekking on Mount Batur is the thing you should opt for. Hiking here is really a rewarding experience that leads the trekkers through enchanting landscapes and scenic views of volcanoes and lakes. Interesting forest villages and some historical temples can also be explored during the journey. Climbing to Mount Batur is not so hard, and a physically fit traveler can easily access the top summits even without help of professional guides. However, unexpected rain can turn the exercise hard, so you may be better preparing well before heading on your hiking tour.

Bukit Timah Hill, Singapore: Itâ€™s perhaps the best place for trekking & hiking in Singapore. Climbing at Bukit Tmah Hill is quite easy that require no special training or equipment. With eye-catching greenery and a variety of flora & fauna, the journey is pleasant yet full of thrilling experiences. Most of the trekking routes have been upgraded to alleviate trekking with various facilities including shelters, food and toilets are available for trekkers. People on Singapore holiday must explore this wonderful opportunity.

Cameron Highlands, Malaysia: Cameron Highlands are truly a hikersâ€™ paradise, but they are not for everyone. Miles of dense forested hills here are dotted with rambling tea plantations, a baffling matrix of summits and barely-noticeable tracks which are not paved. Besides this, thereâ€™s hardly a helpful sign or map on any of trekking routes. Nevertheless, heart-throbbing trekking opportunity, stunning greenery and cool climatic conditions are just too tempting to resists the trekkers to come here. While planning for trekking in Cameron Highlands, youâ€™re highly suggested to take assistance from professional trekkers to this region.

Everest Mini Trek, Nepal: Come here to see the finest views of Everest, the highest peak in the world. This once-in-lifetime trekking opportunity let the hikers explore breathtaking natural beauty through varied enchanting landscapes including cross river valleys, undulating farm terraces, evergreen dense forests and serene scenic mountain lakes. Apart from that, beautiful hill villages and their interesting traditions & cultures are some additional attractions for trekkers to this route.

Gunung Rinjani, Indonesia: Full of thrills and joy, trekking the Mount Rinjani is a truly an unforgettable experience for hikers. With elevation around 12,000 feet, the mountain stands giants on the Island of Lombok alluring adventure enthusiasts from far corners of the globe. Keep remember, trekking Mount Rinjani is not for amateurs. It requires a high level of physical endurance, suitable equipment, an experienced guide and ability to face varied weather conditions. But if you manage to do so, be ready to explore one of the best performances of nature.
