â€˜LGâ€™ might not be a much talked about company or a brand name when we talk about the mobile handset and the other related accessories, but this statement can never change the fact that this company has been performing in the field of electronic since 1958, with the establishment of a company named as â€˜gold starâ€™ which was working in the field of production of various products like radios, TVâ€™s, washing machines, refrigerators and air conditioners. This company was basically an outcome of a merger between two well known Korean companies know as â€˜lucky and gold starâ€™. To be clearer it was in the year 2009 January that LG was able to buy the domain name L.G.com by paying an amount of more than $100million.

Now coming back to our product of the day, it will not be wrong to say that LG Optimus one is an entry level touchscreen smartphone from the house of LG. presently this handset is working on the software known as android 2.2 Froyo, but company is planning to soon upgrade it software to Android 2.3 Gingerbread. In fact while this product was in its initial stage of development it was called with the name of â€˜thunderâ€™.

This attractive handset from the company which came into the market in the month of October in the year 2010, in no time (product named as LG Optimus one) became one of the favorite or we can say most demanded product for many. A touch screen model with a 3.2 inch TFT capacitive touch screen display, an operating system known as Android v2.2 (Froyo) , a 600 MHz processor, various inbuilt Google services like Google search, Google maps and many more are the features which can never make LG Optimus one price a higher one to pay.

While looking at the various features in LG Optimus one which will help you in staying connected, you can find a speed internet and data transfer feature with the help of Wi-Fi, a GPRS, Bluetooth and 3G are also in the list.

A 3mega pixel camera with intelligent face and smile detection feature, geo tagging, inbuilt music player with FM radio and excellent loudspeaker are few more of the entertainment features which will provide you an outstanding experience.

Many in the market suggested that LG Optimus one price is bit higher if compared to other products in the market, but once the comparison was done on the basis of quality and services instead of price, this handset came which much better results than other.

For more information on LG Optimus one reviews and its accurate price you can take help from various online shopping website in India. As with the list of huge discounts they provide, they have became one of the best source to buy an LG Phones.
