Bioidentical Hormone Replacement Therapy Helps Both Men and Women by Phil Altman

Article published on April 17th 2012 | Health

Many people seek chances to improve their health on a normal basis, whether they are trying to achieve a aim like losing weight or trying to maintain their current health. Every resolution a person will make each day will add to their short or long term fitness, so it is significant to recognize the way you are impacting your own life. As you become older, a few points that you have no control over begin to effect your life such as hormonal imbalance. Luckily, advancements in medical science have created solutions like bioidentical hormone replacement therapy have been developed to help individuals manage with these changes in their body.

It is significant to recognize that no two individuals are alike, so the way hormones or a lack of hormones will influence your body will vary. As stated earlier, the way you managed yourself during your life might impact how your imbalance might occur. To assist ease the transition of hormonal change and the utilization of bio-identical hormones, it is significant to recognize the numerous indications which can effect a person. The following identifies the different symptoms which could impact a person's well-being, detailing the alterations in both male.

Women

While most people look at the impact of hormone imbalance they usually associate it to a state of women and the transition into menopause. These signs and symptoms of imbalance will be mild or severe, so the earlier you detect them the swifter you can take action and use possibilities such as bioidentical hormone replacement therapy. Women can start to experience discomforts as early as the age of 30 so make sure you do not ignore potential changes in your body. Inadequate sleep or a shortage of nutrient absorption can be regular indications linked to hormone imbalance. Other indications possibly will include a slowdown of your reproductive system, high stress levels or a lack of energy.

Men

As medical science continues to advance, more discoveries are developed supporting the idea that men are also affected by the familiar biological change of hormone imbalance. While a lot of men of the past merely suffered through these ailments, now the potential of bio-identical hormones will be applied to men. These imbalances most often appear later then women, starting around the age of 40. A lack of testosterone is a primary reason for these imbalances but, may not be the only hormonal imbalance you are experiencing. Indications of this imbalance can comprise erectile disorder, muscle loss, weight gain, bone loss and even an enlargement of your breasts.

The symptoms associated to hormonal imbalance will be terrible and no person will be left to bear. With the answers of bioidentical hormone replacement therapy you will find a sincere answer to assist alleviate this discomfort and maintain a happy lifestyle.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/health-articles/bioidentical-hormone-replacement-therapy-helps-both-men-and-women.htm - Article Side

Phil Altman - About Author:

Discover more on these opportunities by going to a http://www.thehealthychoice.net. The Healthy Choice specializes in compounding customized medications and a bioidentical hormone replacement therapy to fit each patient's requirements. It believes in treating the whole person and the integrative approach to health care gives doctors and patients cutting edge alternatives to mainstream treatments.

Article Keywords:
bioidentical hormone replacement therapy, bio-identical hormones, natural hormones, natural hormone therapy, hormone analysis, hormone imbalance

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!