Styling Tools - Which Hair Brush?

by James

Article published on April 23rd 2012 | Health

You will hear it said many times over, that when it comes to hair styling products, the choices are vast. You will also hear it said many times over that everything you choose should depend on your hair type, your preferences, and your style. When it comes to hair styling tools, it is no different. You have a wide variety of choices. It is never easy choosing which styling tools you should be using. However, with our help, we hope that you will at least understand the different tools and their various uses to help us achieve our distinct hairstyle.

Hair Brushes

As the years go by, styling tools get more and more technical. We see new inventions, new discoveries, and new ways to save us time and money to get the hairstyle we are working for. The following are the various styling tools that both men and women use everyday.

The Differences

If you thought choosing a brush was easy, you are going to be surprised. It is not as simple as picking out one brush and that is that. No, now of hair accessories you have many different types to choose from.Round Hair Brush â€“ Round hair brushes are not for everyone, particularly those with curly hair. These brushes are meant to add body and curls to the normally straight hair. They are also great for speeding up the time it takes to blow dry, thanks to the clever little holes. However, be careful with these, if not used properly, trust me, they become tangled in your hair quite easily; getting them it out is the hard part.

Paddle Hair Brush â€“ These can be large or small, depending on preference and coverage area. These typically have small to medium bristles.

Picks â€“ These are for curly to permed hair, never try to use a regular brush on permed hair, unless you want the perm to come out and extremely uneven at that.

Combs â€“ Typically, men and women with fine hair can get away with using combs. Some women, even those with thick hair, will use a comb for parting in specific spots or separating layers for styling.

No matter what type of brush you are choosing, you want to keep a few things in mind. First, use hair brushes that have a good handle, which will allow you to keep your grip and keep it tight. Next, look at the bristles on the brush, choose those which are fine and small, this will prevent tearing of the hair.

"Styling Tools - Which Hair Brush?" is a courtesy of BeautyItems.com, a beauty supply catalog, and a beauty salon directory.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/health-articles/styling-tools-which-hair-brush.htm - Article Side

James - About Author:
BeautyItems is a beauty directory that includes a San Antonio beauty salons and a hair brush tips.

Article Keywords:
hair brush, round hair brush, styling tools, picks, combs, paddle hair brush

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!