As age passes on, there are certain sacks or bags develop under the eyes and often just above the eyes. This happens because as you grow older, the skin loses its elasticity. As this lack of elasticity gets coupled with the constant gravitational pull, it results in excessive collection of skin in the lower and upper eyelids. This makes your face look dull by causing wrinkles and bulges and on the upper eyelids. The extra fold of skin formation hangs over the eyelashes and often results in poor vision. Although there are certain ways to get rid and reduce these baggy eyelids but the results may not be desirable if you are 35 years or older. Same can be the case if these baggy or droopy eyelids are hereditary. If this is the scenario then the only way you can get rid of such eyelids is by eyelid surgery which is also known as blepharoplasty.

The reason eyelid surgery or blepharoplasty is the only solution to the discussed problem is that it ameliorates your facial appearance and builds or regains your self confidence. However, before you go onto decide for the eye lid surgery there are a few things you might be interested in knowing. First of all, you should understand that this surgery will not give you an entirely different or desirable look. It is better to know your face looks and discuss them with your surgeon before opting for surgery.

The eyelid surgery process doesnâ€™t last more than 2 to 3 hours. To start with, the patient is given a local anesthesia which is usually a painkiller injected around the eye along with a tranquilizer given orally. For those who want surgery for all four eyelids, it is started from the upper lids first. The surgeon makes incisions carefully along the natural eyelids lining and removes the excess fat, skin and muscle. After that the incisions are closed with minute stitches in both upper lids and remain for next three to six days. For the surgery of lower lids, there may be no sutures but it very much depends on the technique used. The most common technique used is called transconjunctival technique in which an incision inside the eyelid which is not visible after the surgery.

The fat is removed through the incisions and the droopy eyelids are corrected. When it comes to cost of eyelid surgery it is obvious that you would want to go for a surgeon or surgical institutes that offers you best services in minimum out of pocket expense. A relatively cheap eyelid surgery can save some bucks but the obtained results may prove to be dreadful. If you look around there so many names offering eyelid surgery that it virtually becomes difficult to choose the best out of them. It is advised to go for a renowned and well reputed surgery center such as Dubai Cosmetic Surgery. The quality of services offered can be compared with any best of the best surgical institutes around the world.
