How to create a free blog? by IRFAN

Article published on December 29th 2011 | Article Marketing

Before you think about how to start a blog and what do you need to create a blogâ€¦ you need to know what a blog is. The simple definitions that you would come across on the internet are that blog is a short form of the term weblog which refers to a frequently complication or collection of comments and opinions on a particular website. Blogs generally reflect the ideas, views and opinions of the person who writes them, also known as the blogger. So, now you know the easy definition of a blog, what makes it different from an article published on the internet?

Blogs have a typical style and it consist of text, images and videos together. They are complied in such a way that the newest blog will be on top followed by older posts by the users. A blog will have a comments section which will invite comments and opinions from the readers as well. A blog writer can write about any topic, from a traffic jam scene to a drastic bomb blast, everything is within the scope and range of a blog which makes blogs more attractive and a larger target audience would be interested in them, for example people blog about their school, colleges, business, work conditions, their pets, parrots, dogs, wildlife, scientific researches, cellular networks, cell phones, laptops etcâ€¦ the list could go on forever and for every commodity and product in the world, you are bound to find a blog or two about it. Such is the popularity of a blog.

Blogs have been around since as long as the internet has been but earlier they were not called blogs, they had other names and it wasnâ€™t until 1997 that the term weblog was coined and it was in the mid 2000â€™s that blog can to limelight and starting having an impact over everything and anything.

So, the big question, how do you create a free blog? How do you start a blog?

Many people who are thinking about starting a blog and have not started one get scared about the technical aspects of it.

People think that creating a blog would mean that you need to be a super computer geek who can code and knows about the internet. The ground reality however is that, any person with basic knowledge of the internet can create a blog for himself.

How? With advancements in technology and the internet, now you have platforms available where you wonâ€™t need to do anything but simply signup and fill a form providing your basic information. After that, the auto setup wizard will guide you through the rest of the process, allowing you to choose a name for your blog, setting a theme, selecting a color scheme and finally publishing your blog. It will hardly take ten minutes for you to create a blog. It however will take much more time to get it popular; exactly how much time depends upon your content and effortâ€¦
