Article Side

Decorate your dining area with oak dining furniture

by Jacob Caden

Article published on July 19th 2012 | Home Improvement

When you invite guests for lunch or dinner, you would love to welcome them to an elaborately decorated dining room. Elegantly designed dining furniture crafted from oak is a symbol of opulence and good taste that most homeowners love to flaunt. Oak dining furniture pieces are sturdy and durable. Moreover, with proper care you can hand them to future generations.

Types of oak dining furniture

Furniture pieces, crafted from oak, designed for the dining area are available in reputed furniture outlets. If time constraint prevents you from visiting a furniture store, consider shopping from an online oak furniture store from the comforts of your home. There are a variety of dining chairs with either fabric or leather seat. You can bring home a standard oak dining table or larger wooden table for occupying the center space of large dining halls. Display cabinet and wine racks are other essential furniture pieces created from oak.

Care for oak dining furniture

Among the different furniture pieces in a house, those placed in the dining area need maximum care. As the dining furniture, especially the dining table is exposed to heat and humidity, regular care is essential for retaining the natural appearance of the furniture. Although untreated as well as treated oak are used for crafting dining furniture, the untreated timber is more widely used for constructing indoor furniture pieces. If your dining furniture is constructed with untreated oak, appropriate care is necessary for preventing staining and retaining the natural luster of the timber.

At least once a year, good quality teak oil should be applied to the furniture. The natural oil of teak increases the resistance of the wooden furniture to pest and insect attack. Moreover, it increases the ability of the timber to withstand extreme temperature and high levels of humidity. Instead of the expensive high-grade teak oil, you can also use Danish oil. Occasionally, the furniture can be wiped with this lubricant.

The risk of staining can be minimized with the help of certain home remedies. The water marks left behind on the dining table can be eliminated by applying butter or margarine to the area. After leaving butter on the area for several hours, wipe the butter and then polish the surface of the table. If the stain does not respond to the butter treatment, wipe the area with olive oil and ash paste. Waxing is recommended to protect the furniture from scratches. If an area of the table is accidentally scorched, leaving toothpaste on the burn for several hours may help to fade the mark.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/home-improvement-articles/decorate-your-dining-area-with-oak-dining-furniture.htm - Article Side

Jacob Caden - About Author:
Welcome to Oak - One of the UK's leading suppliers of quality a oak furniture for your home. We make every effort to a solid oak furniture to supply our contemporary oak range a Oak Dining Furniture.

Article Keywords:
oak furniture, oak dining furniture, solid oak furniture

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!