Different Types of Roofs Provided by Miami Roofing Companies by Richard Boles

Article published on March 22nd 2012 | Home Improvement

There are many types of roofs you can choose for your Miami home, and some of these include metal, tile, and shingle. Different types of roofs may be more effective, depending on what situation you need them for. Metal roofs have superior weather resistance, especially to wind and rust. While you cannot prevent daily weathering, you can rely on metal roofs because they are impervious to heavy rain, wind, rust, and even fire. Every metal roof can sustain the heavy rain that falls in Miami, as well as strong winds averaging 120 mph. Unlike asphalt, shingle, or wooden roofs, metal ones will not burn.

Tile roofs are great under most types of weather as well, and they are energy-efficient. Your home electricity bill can certainly be reduced when you use a tile roof because of the enhanced air circulation between the covering tiles and roof deck. This limits heat transfer, decreasing the power needed to run air conditioning units. Furthermore, tile roofs come with some of the longest warranties. As compared with the cost and durability of a shingle roof, the tile roof proves to be more efficient.

Asphalt shingle roofs are the most widely used roofing material, and they are affordable options for your home. It has a stronger wind resistance rating of 130 mph, more than the 120 mph metal roofs can sustain. Asphalt shingle roofs are also energy-efficient, having met Energy Star standards and graded by the Cool Roof Rating Council. When you use asphalt shingle roofs, you can also have underlayment installed which provide superior protection from storms.

If you donâ€™t know what to pick for your home, Miami roofing companies will be there to give you expert advice. They provide free estimates so that you will know how much your roof installation or remodeling will cost you. Additionally, your roofing company will provide you with a production schedule so that you know precisely what will happen and when.

When you find your Miami roofing company, make sure it only deals with the top manufacturers in the country. This guarantees high-quality materials that are built to last to protect your Miami home. Likewise, know whether your roofing company is a certified installer for the brands they use. This means their team received professional training in roof installment.

You can count on the warranty provided by Miami roofing companies. This is only given by the manufacturers to certified installers. If you would like to read up some more on types of roofs, visit: houzz.com/ideabooks/113065/list/10-Different-Types-of-Roofs-for-your-Home and homeimprovementhelper.com/roof/typesofroofs.htm.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/home-improvement-articles/different-types-of-roofs-provided-by-miami-roofing-companies.htm - Article Side

Richard Boles - About Author:
If you have questions, please visit us at www.IstuetaRoofing.com for complete details and answers.

Article Keywords:
miami roofing companies, miami roofing company

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!