Article Side

A Lowdown on the Different Recreational Vehicle Types by Tia Oshields

Article published on June 4th 2012 | Auto

Itâ€™s springtime once again, an ideal season to take the family on a camping tour. The problem is, you donâ€™t have your own recreational vehicle (RV), and you are not sure what to choose among the many types that are offered by RV dealers. Whether you buy new or used, it helps to know the basics about RVs to come up with a good decision on what to purchase.

Recreational vehicles can be classified into three general categories: motorhomes, campers, and trailers. Each general category can be broken down into more specific vehicle types. Each type of recreational vehicle has its own advantages and limitations. The type of recreational vehicle you purchase will be greatly influenced by your needs, activities, and the number of people that may go with you on the trip.

Motorhomes â€“ Motorhomes are self-contained units that offer living accommodation combined with a vehicleâ€™s engine. This type of recreational vehicle allows you to be â€œinside the homeâ€• while you d down the road. Motorhomes are categorized as Class A, B, and C.

Class A, or integrated motorhomes, are often the most luxurious of the three types. It is constructed on bus or truck chassis and offers a wide view of the road while driving. Class B, or campervans, are usually smaller than Class A types and are usually built on a vanâ€™s chassis. Class C, or alcove motorhomes, are generally lower in height than a Class A.

Campers â€“ Campers are recreational vehicles mounted over pickup trucks. They can be easily dismounted from the carrying vehicle. They are best used for off-road activities such as fishing, hunting, and horseback riding. It is easy to fit an existing pickup truck with a used RV Edmonton dealers have in their inventories.

Trailers â€“ Trailers or caravans are recreational vehicles towed behind a road vehicle. They come in many sizes and are ideal for people who stay in campgrounds. Once you set up the trailer home in the campsite, you can travel around with only the towing vehicle. A trailer, which is a common sight in the suburbs of Alberta, can be purchased from an RV dealer Edmonton residents can count on for their camping needs.

To know more about recreational vehicles, you can visit blog.rv.net and familiesontheroad.com. These resources can give you more information on the different types of recreational vehicles and tips on how to purchase. If you are looking to buy a recreational vehicle, go to rvhotlinecanada.com to locate an RV dealer Edmonton campers have trusted for many years.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/auto-articles/a-lowdown-on-the-different-recreational-vehicle-types.htm - Article Side

Tia Oshields - About Author:
For more details, search a used RV Edmonton and a RV dealer Edmonton in Google for related information.

Article Keywords:

rv dealer edmonton, used rv edmonton

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!