What is a House Inspection and Why Should I Choose Inspect-It 1st by Steve Mark

Article published on January 24th 2012 | Home Improvement

If you are buying a new home, building a new construction or you are intending to sell your current home, a quality home inspection by Inspect-It 1st will allow you to make a confident, intelligent property decision that will give you peace of mind.

A home inspection is a visual and objective examination of your house which includes the physical structure, home systems and basically everything from the foundation to the roof. If problems or issues that may need attention in the future are found, the inspector may also recommend further evaluation.

A home inspection includes a summary of the findings from the visual inspection. This reveals the condition of the A/C and heating systems, plumbing and electrical systems, roof, attic, walls, ceiling, floors, windows, etc. All of the visual structures of your house should be included.

You need a home inspection because it sums up the total condition of your property. It will also point out if there is a need for any major repair and identifies areas that may require attention. Receiving an accurate home inspection is crucial to maximizing your property knowledge so that you can make an intelligent buying or selling decision.

This report will point out the positive attributes of your home as well as what maintenance needs to be done in the near future. This will give you a much clearer understanding of the needs and value of your property.

For a homeowner, this inspection can be used to identify problems in the making and offer preventative measures so there is a much smaller chance of costly future repairs. On the other hand, if you are planning to sell your home, utilizing a home inspector prior to putting your house on the market will give you a better understanding of conditions that may be found by the buyer's inspector. This will give you a chance to make preemptive repairs.

The inspection cost for a typical home will vary by size, features of the property and age of the home. You can also establish septic inspections as well as random testing on your property. Don't be afraid of any of the home inspection fees; the knowledge you will gain is well worth the time and expense. The lowest price is not usually the best deal. The companyâ€™s qualifications, which include training, experience and word of mouth reputation, should be your primary concern in your choice.

If youâ€™re considering doing it yourself, you may want to reconsider. The most experienced homeowner lacks the expertise and knowledge of a professional. A professional home inspector will have the experience, knowledge, depth and unparalleled training to make an informed report of your property.

A quality home inspection company like Inspect-It 1st will have all of the elements necessary to give you an unbiased and professional inspection. An inspector understands how the home's systems and components are intended to function together, as well as how and why they fail and what to look for. An inspector is uniquely suited to interpret what their findings reveal about the condition of the property.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/home-improvement-articles/what-is-a-house-inspection-and-why-should-i-

Steve Mark - About Author:
Inspect-It 1st is a a home inspection company that has been in business for almost two decades. Not only is every a home inspector that they employ certified, knowledgeable and professional, this company will provide superior customer service and consistent high quality inspections to give you peace of mind.

Article Keywords:
home inspection, certified home inspector, home inspection company, property inspection

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!