Article published on January 23rd 2012 | Interior Design

Painting a business can be a costly endeavor. To avoid paying too much, consider these important questions to ask when commercial painting in San Jose. Reputable painters, like the experts at Commercial Painting, Inc., welcome being interviewed prior to being hired. It is extremely important that these questions be asked because they will determine whether or not a particular contractor is the right one. It may be necessary after hearing their response, to keep searching. Conversely, a company may decide that theyâ€™ve found the right contractor. You will want to ask the following questions because they can potentially save your company a ton of money.

Questions to Ask Commercial Painters Prior to Hiring Them

How Accurate is Your Estimate?

Some contractors will give a low estimate hoping to secure the job but then add fees and/or charges later on. This can significantly increase your final cost. It is important to try to avoid falling into this trap. You can decrease the likelihood of this by asking how accurate or firm the contractorâ€™s estimate is. If they reply that it is not really firm, keep looking. The better painting contractors give estimates that are firm and complete. They will include every aspect of the job in the estimate.

Do You Have a Set Schedule?

A contractor that plans on coming and going without a set schedule may not be the right choice for your company. A preferable one would arrive and leave at the same time every day. A set schedule also increases the likelihood that the job will be completed in a timely manner.

Is Your Company Bonded, Licensed and Insured?

It is extremely important to work with a contractor that is bonded, licensed and insured. Being bonded and insured are perhaps the most important of the three. Being bonded means that the company has a monetary reserve that will take care of incidental and inadvertent damage or accidents. These monies will be given to the building owner right away, if necessary. They wonâ€™t have to wait for the insurance company to settle a claim. Companies that are insured will have an insurance policy which covers much of the same things.

Will You Be Doing the Work or Will a Subcontractor?

Some contractors will hire subcontractors to paint. They wonâ€™t be doing it themselves. Some businesses will have a problem with this. If that is a concern, you may want to find a contractor who actually does the work themselves. Passing it on to someone else carries a certain amount of risks that some companyâ€™s arenâ€™t willing to take.

Knowing which questions to ask when commercial painting in San Jose can save your company money. Consider asking these and pay attention to the answers you receive to choose the right contractor for your job.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/interior-design-articles/questions-to-ask-when-commercial-painting-in-san-jose.htm - Article Side

Mark Thissell - About Author:
a Custom Painting Inc. , a full service Painting Company in California that also provides Custom Moldings Installation, and a Commercial Painting Services. By hiring Custom Painting contractors you have nothing to worry but just look forward to building a successful and aesthetic work environment. Contact us to set up an appointment to discuss your painting project.

Article Keywords:
commercial painting, commercial painting company, commercial painting contractor, best painting contractor, painting company

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!