2013 Chevrolet Spark hatchback is going to be an out of the box hatchback in comparison to other small cars in this segment. Chevrolet Sail hatchback is going to launch in India during August or September. The hatchback will be roomier enough to accommodate four adults comfortably. There were talks about the electric version of Chevrolet Spark too which now seems, could take shape by the year 2013. In the A segment of the Indian car market which comprises of mini hatchbacks like Maruti Alto, Hyundai Eon etc, the new 2012 Chevrolet Spark hatchback could prove to be a hysteria.

The rear seats will come with cup holders which is presently absent in the current version of the hatchback. Legroom and headroom will also be much better than the previous version of the hatchback. However if we talk about the driving dynamics, it has been subsided which seems a little shocking considering that a car is eventually judged on its performance. Air conditioner which is still not that effective will continue to be the same in the new avatar of the hatchback. There is one good change and that is the presence of power windows both in front and rear side of the hatchback.

The small car from the clan of Chevrolet is very airy and sturdy too. The height of the car is good enough that renders good space inside the hatchback. The engine producing a peak power of 83 HP will be equipping the new avatar of the small car. With a new tinge of look, Spark will offer a breath of fresh air to the hatchback, generous interiors will add on to the positive points of the small car. This new version of the hatchback is speculated to be a replacement of Daewoo Matiz. On the other hand many believe that Spark has no resemblance with the phased out hatchback. Other than Chevrolet Spark, Chevrolet Sail is yet another small car will also make its way into the Indian car market this year. This is going to be a completely new product in the domestic market. Rumour mills are doing the rounds that Chevrolet Sail hatchback is a replacement of Chevrolet Aveo U-VA hatchback which has been present in India for some time and could not perform well.

Small cars in India are extremely popular therefore Chevrolet is thinking to bring in a new player in the highly popular segment. Along with these there is another compact sedan which is on its way in the Indian car market. This would be a sedan version of the Sail hatchback which would be launched first in India followed by the Chevrolet Sail sedan. Chevrolet Sail hatchback price in India would be tagged above Beat therefore expect it to lie between Rs 4 lakhs. Another entry in the premium hatchback means customers will have more choice in this segment. Chevrolet seems to be all geared up to ramp up its sales and hence has slated consecutive launches for this year including facelifts and new cars.
