Common Vehicle Types and What Theyâ€™re Built For

Leisa Dreps

Article published on March 28th 2012 | Auto

Automobile manufacturers work very hard to achieve diversity in their vehicle models so they can cater to people from all walks of life. The biggest automotive companies have different vehicle models: from sports cars and trailer trucks, to station wagons and vans. Each vehicle, of course, is designed for particular purposes, ranging from business operations to family use.

With more than enough choices, it may be a bit of a dilemma to find an automobile that best suits your lifestyle and preferences. Say you have a family of five â€“ you wouldnâ€™t think of buying a two-doo two-seater car, would you? A good choice would be more in the form of a large four-door, four-seater sedan where everyone can fit comfortably. Automotive companies such as Hyundai have a wide variety of car models you can choose from. Here are some of the car types that automotive companies commonly make.

Coupes. These are small two-door cars with four seats. A coupeâ€™s basic feature is a roof that inclines towards the rear, giving it a sporty feel. Coupe owners are usually single adults or childless couples. Hyundai is the maker of a popular coupe model called the Elantra.

SUVs. Short for Sports Utility Vehicle, SUVs vehicles which are specifically made for off-road use. SUVs are commonly rugged four-wheel drives to ensure that the vehicle will run well on uneven terrain. However, because of its popularity, more luxurious models were made and the rugged features were replaced with more elegant designs. The Santa Fe is a popular Hyundai SUV model sold by Hyundai dealers Indianapolis offers.

Vans. If you transport huge amounts of cargo or need a vehicle that will fit more than passengers, a full-sized van may be your best option. There are multiple variations for this type of vehicle because they are often purchased for commercial use. Vans may come with or without windows. They can also come in varying weight capacities; some can even handle cargo that weighs over a ton. Extended vans can even seat 15 adults comfortably, and there are other models that can manage to tow large pickup trucks and trailers. Hyundai is the maker of a popular van model called the Starex. However, it is currently not sold in any Hyundai Indianapolis car dealership.

If youâ€™re looking for the nearest Hyundai dealership Indianapolis offers in your area, you can check out this site: autotrader.com/find/Indianapolis-Hyundai-dealers-46204.jsp.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/auto-articles/common-vehicle-types-and-what-they-re-built-for.htm - Article Side

Leisa Dreps - About Author:
For more details, please search a Hyundai dealers Indianapolis, a Hyundai Indianapolis and a Hyundai dealership Indianapolis in Google.

Article Keywords:
hyundai dealers indianapolis, hyundai dealership indianapolis, hyundai indianapolis

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!