Freedom is a person's right to live as he wishes without anyone dictating him what to do, feel, and comprehend. Sadly, many people have nearly forgotten the freedom they currently experience is not possible without the help of US Veterans. Veterans put their lives on the line for the country, giving it the strength, stability, and power it has today.

Veterans often return to their civilian lives with tired bodies, traumatized minds, and a plethora of issues. Many feel it's their duty to pay back what these courageous men and women had sacrificed for the nation's sake. The best way to do so is by donating to veterans and veteran causes. There are numerous organizations that perform charitable services on behalf of US veterans, so locating one will not be much of a feat.

According to the Veterans Administration, there are 23 million living US veterans. They could be anyone; your next-door neighbor, the person who feeds swallows at the park, or the person you run into at the terminal. Unfortunately, veterans don't really live a life of luxury after their service for the country like some people assume.

The Veterans Affairs Development revealed that there are currently 1,500 homeless veterans from the current wars. In fact, veterans make up one in every four homeless people in the United States. Even worse news is that homelessness isn't just their problem â€“some younger veterans from Iraq and Afghanistan are bedridden while others are in desperate search for a new job.

For instance, Minneapolis houses 27,186 civilian veterans, accounting for 9.1 percent of the population. It's certain that around a quarter of veterans in that figure are suffering from homelessness and unemployment. With the help of Minneapolis charities, you can make a difference. Giving a few dollars out of goodwill does not only give veterans a smile, but also a roof over their heads.

If you're not satisfied with simply giving donations Minneapolis veterans need, consider taking your own course of action. You can help a veteran find temporary housing in a shelter by contacting the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development and creating a file of the person's records, which is required to get housing, a job, and other benefits. Record should include photo identification, birth certificate, and a social security card.

In the words of William James: "Act as if what you do makes a difference. It does". Donations Minneapolis charities accept can change the life of one veteran, and it can also change yours. For more donation ideas, log on to the Washington State Department of Veterans affairs at WA.gov.
