Hyundai vs. Lexus: What IN Residents Need to Know About Luxury SUVs by Kerstin Shed

Article published on April 21st 2012 | Auto

When you're thinking of buying a luxury SUV, it is important to have many options so you can make sure the car you get meets all your needs. One of the most popular luxury SUVs in the market today is the Lexus RX, but competing directly against it is the Hyundai Veracruz. Knowing the pros and cons of both is a good start to your car-buying endeavor.

Sedans may be great for some people, but for others, it can be a little cramped, especially when one has a family. This is where a luxury SUV comes in, providing all that space for your family and your things, without sacrificing optimum comfort. Lexus has been manufacturing luxury SUVs since the 1990s, and the RX is one of its best-selling models. The Hyundai Veracruz, on the other hand, was released in 2004, and was designed to compete directly with the luxury SUVs offered by Lexus.

Lexus RX

The RX was first released in 1998, while newer models were released in 2003 and 2009. RX vehicles came with a V6 engine and five-speed automatic transmission capability, and were available either in all-wheel or front-wheel drive. In 2005, Lexus also introduced the RX hybrid, a more fuel-efficient version of the original RX but with all the raw power and luxury amenities that was in the original still intact. Of course, the RX hybrid had a higher price tag.

Hyundai Veracruz

When the Veracruz was first released in the US automobile market in 2007, it received the highest safety rating given by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. Hyundai Motors places much importance on the safety functions of their vehicles, and this was reflected in the Hyundai Veracruz with its anti-lock brakes, airbags, and stability controls. The Veracruz has luxury amenities as well, and upgrades are available.

Similarities

Besides looking like they came out of the same mold, most of the two cars' specifications have a lot in common. Car dealerships in Indianapolis IN can tell you that they both sport V6 engines with front- or all-wheel drive capabilities, as well as all the standard luxury features. The Veracruz and the original RX also have the same fuel efficiency ratings.

Differences

Car dealerships Indianapolis IN has also agree that the key difference between the two is the price. The Veracruz is more affordable. Also, the Veracruz has a third row of seats, which makes it preferable for drivers with families.

In the end, because the two vehicles are strikingly similar, it would all come down to brand loyalty and your specific needs.
