The Ford Escape: Available at Used Car Dealerships in Indianapolis by Erwin Calverley

Article published on April 3rd 2012 | Auto

Everybody has a penchant for cars due to their mobility and style. Cars transport us to places in a jiffy, while keeping us comfortable and relaxed. Presently, people have developed a liking for SUVs and crossovers because these vehicles are highly functional and roadworthy.

Ford is an automobile manufacturer well known for producing SUVs and crossovers. The first generation Ford Escape was released in North America in 2001. It was a successor to the truck-based Explorer. The second generation debuted in 2006 at the Los Angeles International Auto Show. Changes noted in the second generation models include an enhanced electronic stability control system that soon became standard on the Ford Escape. In addition, Ford recently released its third generation Ford Escape, and also produced the first hybrid SUV of this model.

The Ford Escape was sold in Europe as the Ford Maverick and was developed together with the Mazda. The Escape was built using Fordâ€™s CD2 platform, which was based on Mazdaâ€™s GF platfor The Escape also has a front-wheel drive platform and comes with an all-wheel drive option which is still being used for the latest generations.

Currently the Escape has three generations; the latest generation was revealed last 2011 at the Los Angeles International Auto Show. The latest Ford Focus now shares the basic platform with styling influences from the Ford Kuga in Europe.

The Ford Escape is powered by a 3.0L V6 engine with automatic transmission, fuel coverage that ranges from 23-24 mpg, the latest ABS (Anti-Lock Braking System), stability control system, and traction control. It is also equipped with head and passenger airbags, dusk sensing headlights, and front fog lights. It offers the convenience ideally suited for adventurous spirits, as it is equipped with a compass, power mirrors, defoggers, satellite radio, power door locks, steering wheel radio controls, and external temperature display. These features have made the used Ford Escape Indianapolis dealerships offer such a hit with car enthusiasts.

The Ford Escape comes in five different trims: the XLS, XLT, Limited, Hybrid, and Hybrid Limited. The hybrid is revamped physically, though its drivetrain is still the same with some extensive software modifications. Prospective care buyers can inquire about the availability of these trims at the used Ford Escape Indianapolis dealership.

The Ford Escape is perfect for those drivers who love the outdoors but prefer the luxury of indoor amenities. In addition, the used cars Indianapolis Indiana dealers offer provide you with an array of cars in their inventory aside from Ford Escape. You may visit ford.com or thecarconnection.com for more information about the Ford Escape and other vehicles.
