Article Side
Online and Offline Process of Company Incorporation UK by Nrainman

Article published on December 15th 2011 | Management

The procedure of company formation also known as company registration or company incorporation. There are various company forms like Public limited company, Limited liability partnership, Private company (limited by shares) to name a few among many. The process of company formation differs from country to country. Sometimes, different areas/jurisdictions of a country or city develop their respective laws and regulations. Company Incorporation UK need to be carried out as per specific laws. Company can be incorporated in UK in two ways that are through the paper process and online/electronic business formation. The paper process requires people to send some documents along with company details and the registration fee to the respective country's company formation regulatory authority. The official time allowed for paper submission is two weeks. Offline incorporations require people to send the application either by recorded or through registered post to provide some source of tracking the documents. Notification in the case of offline company incorporations is carried out through the postal system. Hence, the notification results can take a few days time to reach in the hands of the intended recipient. Form incorporating a company in UK, Companies House charge a standard fee of Â£15 per formation, as well as, Â£30 for same day service. Offline company formation requires a solicitor to verify the declarant's signature, shareholders and company directors. The expenses on this can be extremely high in case the general advice and explanation time is included in the fees.

The online process of Company Incorporation UK takes just five days. However, actually some companies take only one to four hours to complete this process. Usually, the online process performed easily without any error. Most company formation software offers data validation features. It results in ease in completing the application. Most of the online company formations confirm about the status of notification of submission of application to the Companies House. The response of the Companies House whether it is positive or negative is forwarded immediately to the company formation agent. Electronic business incorporations charge Â£20 or more. Some companies that complete this process more quickly charge high fees accordingly. A number of company formation agents offer some additional services like company registers, seals, as well as, registered office facilities. They sometimes provide nominees for setting up companies using their systems. As far as company formation in UK is concerned, online method is more popular than the traditional offline procedure. The reason behind this is online incorporation provide a straightforward process of communication. This method also ensure this process carried out with fewer omissions and mistakes.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/management-articles/online-and-offline-process-of-company-incorporation-uk.htm - Article Side

Nrainman - About Author:
Fast Formation makes the procedure of a Company Incorporation UK extremely easy. We offer services through a dedicated team of company formation agents, business consultants, solicitors and tax experts.

Article Keywords:
company incorporation uk

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!