Having a baby is a dream come true for any parent. You want to give that little angel each and every joy the world can offer. Nothing but the best is ever good enough for your baby. The planning for your child's arrival starts right from the fourth or fifth month of pregnancy. You start browsing through baby accessories and clothes at the shopping centers, check out prams and strollers, start reading books on giving birth and parenting, talk to friends and colleagues that have had kids in the recent past, and start preparing a separate room for the baby in your home. A nursery is essential. It is where the baby will spend most of her hours in, so obviously you want it to be perfect. And since, you know if you are going blue or pink, at least the color scheme of the room is somewhat finalized.

A nursery needs to feel pleasant. In addition to using pastel colors on the walls, you could consider decorating the room with some wall art. Next are the furniture and baby accessories. You will need a baby cot with a soft mattress, a couple of sets of sheet, and blankets, wraps and swaddles. The room should also have a change table, towels, face-washers, nappies, terry cloth nappies, and basic toiletries like nappy wipes, cotton wool balls, cotton buds, nappy rash cream, baby lotion, etc. If you are planning on breastfeeding you need breastpads, bottles, and a special feeding pillow or V shaped cushion. Other essentials for a totally equipped nursery may be a baby monitor, a nappy bag, mittens, nail clippers, a bassinette, a digital ear thermometer, pacifiers and baby powder.

Whether or not you keep these items in the nursery, you are going to need a baby carrier or sling, a pram with a sunshade for walks in the sun, and a baby capsule and car-seat. There is no need to buy too many clothes before the baby arrives, as estimating the size can be difficult, but some clothes are necessary. You should buy a couple of singlet suits, short sleeved bodysuits, long sleeved growsuits and socks. Or you could wait for the baby shower or gifts to arrive, seeing that most friends will buy baby clothes as gifts for an expecting mom.

If you have already decided the name for your bundle of joy, check online baby accessories stores for personalized labels and clothing. You can choose from various fonts and sizes to make the name look attractive. There are many baby boutiques too that sell fun and funky accessories like headbands, hats, leg warmers, baby packs, tutus, rompers, etc. After all, with a baby on the way, going out and walking through long aisles at the malls is the last thing on your mind – Kapil Edke.
